Lay out the inner ball so that it is loosely folded lengthwise and the inflation hole is visible on one end.

Insert the inner ball into the cover so that the inflation hole is sticking out of the zippered opening.

With the inner ball sticking out a few inches from the zippered opening, begin inflating the inner ball.

During inflation adjust the inner ball so that the inflation hole sits at the top end of the zippered opening of the cover. The inner ball may need to be deflated periodically during inflation to make adjustments.

With the inflating hole at the top of the zippered opening (pictured above), continue inflating the ball until there is no space between the inner ball and the cover.

Close the zippered opening until only the inflation hole is accessible. Continue inflating the ball until it is quite firm and the ball provides a solid seating base. When done inflating, quickly insert the plug after removing the pump, and fully close the zippered opening.
